Over 40 million animals are killed for fur each year.

Many of them are caught in painful traps and suffer for days before they are killed. Animals raised on fur ranches are no luckier. Since there are no laws to govern how they are treated or killed, millions of animals are raised in tiny, unsanitary cages with no veterinary care. These animals are then killed by such inhumane practices as bludgeoning, strangulation, gassing, or genital electrocution.
